CAMP McDOUGALL

Accessibility

Camp McDougall is committed to making camp and this website accessible to everyone. Last updated November 2026.

At Camp

One of our sleeping cabins is wheelchair accessible. The dining hall and main washroom building are on level ground. We work with families to accommodate individual needs — please contact the Camp Director to discuss how we can help.

On this website

We want everyone to be able to read and use this website, and we built it with the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) 2.1, Level AA, as our goal. In practice we have worked to make sure that:

- Every page can be used with a keyboard alone, and it is always visible where you are on the page.
- Pages are built with proper headings, lists and labels, so they work with screen readers.
- Photos that carry meaning have text descriptions.
- Text has strong contrast against its background and can be enlarged with your browser's zoom without anything being cut off.
- The site works on phones, tablets and computers.
- Moving content can be paused, and it stays still if your device is set to reduce motion.
- Links that open a new tab or a document say so.

Where you may still run into barriers

- Registration, donations and event tickets happen on other organizations' sites (CampBrain, CanadaHelps and Zeffy). We do not control how those sites are built. If you have trouble using one of them, contact us and we will help you register or give another way.
- The map on the home page is provided by Google. Where Camp is is also described in words beside the map, and the full address is at the bottom of every page.
- Some downloadable documents, such as PDFs, may not work well with every screen reader. The same information is on the web page they come from, and we can send it in another format.

Other formats and help

If you need anything on this website in a different format, such as large print or plain text, or you would rather have it read or explained to you by phone, tell us what would work for you and we will arrange it at no cost.

Tell us about a problem

If something on this website is hard to use, or you have a suggestion about accessibility at Camp, we want to hear about it. Email campmcdougall@gmail.com, call (705) 842-2524, or write to Camp McDougall, 12679 ON-17, Thessalon, ON P0R 1L0. Please tell us which page you were on and what happened, and we will reply and work on a fix.
